Not illustrated. 1902 Excerpt: .of course, that religious, and not secondary, education is the object of the Mission, that the training of priests and laymen is what is sought. But the number properlyfitted for the purposes you have in view is comparatively small. There still remains the majority of those boys, who go from your schools, to be provided for in other ways. What is to become of them? Some go into service and one or two into Government or private offices; but many are not fitted for a position of trust any more than for the ministry. Very many of the boys coming from the school at Kiungani are excellent specimens of manhood morally, intellectually, and physically; but as to many of them the Bishop will agree that it is difficult for him to provide them with suitable employment. These boys ought, I think, to be sent to an Industrial School. They could be drafted off--when seen not fitted for the Mission or teaching--to where they could be taught how to earn an honest livelihood. I sincerely believe that this scheme, if it could be carried out, would be a step towards the organising of the country. You might start with a carpenter or printer or mason, and later follow with a plumber or bootmaker. Boots are becoming quite a fashionable article of attire, and anyone who has any regard for himself or his family will not be seen without them by-and-by. As a Government official and a private...
