A misdemeanor is, in truth, any crime less than a felony, and the word is generally used in contradistinction to felony. Misdemeanors, comprehending all indictable offences which do not amount of felony. Misdemeanors are divided into two classes, such as are mala in se, or penal at the common law, and such as are mala prohibita, or penal by statute. I. Misdemeanors which become such by statutes are of two sorts: 1st. Those which consist in the commission or omission of any act enjoined or forbidden by statute, though by such statute such commission or omission is not made the subject of indictment. 2d. Those which consist of the omission or commission of any act which, by itself, is made specifically indictable. Where the performance of any act is prohibited by any statute, and no penalty for the violation of such statute is imposed, either in the same section containing such prohibition, or in any other section or statute, the doing of such act is by statutory enactment to be deemed a misdemeanor.
