Rather, it reflects changes in the economy and changes in mail use patterns. It reflects an infrastructure that ex-ceeds customer needs and costs that are beyond our authority to control. The issue is not the value of the mail. Despite the vast techno-logical changes over the last decade, the mail still is a vital channel for financial, business, and personal communications. It is a con-duit for trillions of dollars in transactions each year. It is one of the most trusted services in America and one of the most effective. It offers unsurpassed value, and we are working to increase that value each and every day. At the end of the day, though, through focused and complemen-tary efforts, we can protect a vital and vibrant national postal sys-tem. The Postal Service must and will continue to bring efficiency and...
