The lectures were open to the public, but laboratory work in addition was provided for senior students who elected the course. The co-operation of distinguished experts was obtained. Requests for copies of the individual lectures and the entire course have been so numerous that it was decided to put them in book form. In a few cases the lectures were not prepared for publication. These have been substituted by specially prepared articles. A perusal of these chapters cannot fail to prove interesting to any citizen and the writer feels that their study will accomplish good in any community, for they tell of the applications of enlightened common sense where people congregate and form cities; but...
