America Star Books. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 108 pages. Dimensions: 8.6in. x 5.5in. x 0.3in.Baby-boomer Katha Winther, reminisces about her childhood. Her upbringing in a small Texas town was slow-paced. Her loving parents shaped her character, fed her with down home cooking, encouraged Christian values, and church attendance. Kathas mother wrote in her baby book, and it became a precious keepsake. She followed her mothers example, and wrote in her own childrens books. She wrote an addendum to the book, including little journal entries of what her children said and did each day. Her personal notes, written in a conversational style, reveal what life was like for a twenty-something mother. A poetic excerpt from the book follows: I wrote in my childrens baby books, So they could later take a look. . . At what they thought and did and said. They were so cute we often read. As I Was Saying . . . is a delightful read for anyone! Explore the timeless bond between mother and child. This item ships from multiple locations.
